

Editor's Note

It is almost two years since AMJAM has been issued. We have made several changes, including a new manuscript format, website for manuscript submission and for reviewers. Several more changes are currently in progress, for instance the partnership with international publishers, such as, Elsevier to improve the visibility of our works, counting our journal impact factors in the past 2 years, creating the virtual abstract and journal advertisement via journal watch. Further more changes may be made in the years to come. Our editorial team is working hard to improve the quality of AMJAM with the eventual aim to get into Scopus database. We hope that our readers will support our journal by submitting their high quality work to AMJAM to help improve the quality of the journal.

Anucha Apisarntharak, M.D.
Professor in Infectious Diseases
Editor-in-Chief
Asian Medical Journal and Alternative Medicine (AMJAM)