

Editor's Note

It has been 3 years since AMJAM was started to be issued. We have conducted several changes, including the new website, manuscript format, website for manuscript submission, and for reviewers. Several changes are in progress, including partnership with international publishers, such as, Elsevier to improve the accessibility of our works, counting our journal impact factors in the past 2 years, creating the virtual abstract and journal advertisement via journal watch. More changes will be coming in the years to come. Editorial team is working hard to improve the quality of AMJAM with the eventual aim to get into the Scopus database. We hope that our readers will support the journal by submitting high-quality work to AMJAM to help improve the quality of the journal.

Anucha Apisarnthanarak, M.D.
Professor in Infectious Diseases
Editor-in-Chief
Asian Medical Journal and Alternative Medicine (AMJAM)